INDIRA B. GUJRAL

BIOGRAPHY

Indira Gujral, MS, PhD is an Epidemiologist and Division Manager for Communicable Disease and Emergency Management at Boulder County Public Health.

She spent five years as a Senior Epidemiologist at the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment, three years with the Poudre Valley Health System (now University of Colorado Health), five years as a graduate research assistant at Colorado State University where she received her doctorate, and over five years at the University of Missouri-Columbia hospital as a research assistant for an injury study. Dr. Gujral has been working on health equity issues throughout her career and is a passionate advocate for social justice issues in and out of public health. She holds an adjunct faculty position with the University of Colorado Denver where she teaches courses in Social Determinants of Health, Environmental Health, and Epidemiology. Dr. Gujral was a founding member of the health equity workgroup as part of the Metro Denver Partnership for Health and supports the Rocky Mountain Training Center with their courses in evidence-based public health and soon to be launched health equity learning series. Since joining Boulder County Public Health in 2014, she has been working with agency leadership to include equity as a priority. She believes in raising the voices of others, empowering others to find their leadership potential and striving to foster a culture of transformation.
