JERE THOMAS BIOGRAPHY

Jere Thomas, LCSW, ACC, founded Sage Resources, a leadership and organizational development firm, in 2002. Since then she has partnered with a broad range of individuals and groups to grow their leadership skills, from Oracle executives to public health collaboratives to international human rights professionals. Jere is known for her ability to develop excellence in leaders and teams; helping them work well together to achieve better outcomes, more quickly and more sustainably.

Jere's own leadership is built off a diverse background that blends the academic with the experiential. She's led remote wilderness expeditions, co-founded an award winning leadership non-profit, worked in public and behavioral health at the community and systems level, and developed multiple cross agency collaborations. In addition to Sage Resources, Jere is an associate with Europe-based Lane4 Performance consulting firm and is senior staff at the National Outdoor Leadership School (NOLS) where she specializes in developing organizational leadership and teams.

Jere holds a BA from Brown University, an MSW from CSU Sacramento, and a Leadership Coaching certificate from Georgetown University.
